MISS SOUTHGATE, EVENING WORLD EXPERT DECLARES

Dr. Charles Phelps, Gunshot Expert, Declares Have Been Inflicted by the Girl Hers If.

The Evening World is enabled to state that in all human probability Helen Southgate was shot by Henry Grosvenor Harbour. A carefully drawn diagram of the wound inflicted upon Miss Southgate, together with her statement and the statement of her physician, was submitted by The Evening World to Dr. Charles Phelps, the famous expert on gun shot wounds.

Dr. Pheips's opinion is that young Barbour shot Miss Southgate, unless she is tooth. I think the combination of menleft-handed, in which case she might have tal and physical trouble unbalanced inflicted the wound herself.

Miss Southgate is right - 'anded. DICTATED TO AN EVENING WORLD REPORTER BY DR. CHARLES PHELPS.

"From the description and disgram fur-nished me Miss Southgate's wound was inflicted by some person other than herself. The deflection to the right indicates this in my opinion. Unless Miss Southgate is left handed she could not have shot herself in the way described,

"The young woman probably owes her life to the fact that the pistol had a short barrel and consequently the bullet lacked the penetration of a long barrel. Had the bullet struck the sternum squarely, however, it would probably have penertated it.

'In cases where a bullet strikes a bone such as the sternum, it may, if the weapon is held at a very slight angle, deflect it one way or the other with equal readiness. It is evident that a built fired directly at the sternum was ed to kill, whether by a person other than the person shot or by the IA smaller bullet fired from a nistal having a longer barrel would probably have been more effective.

Deputy Coroner Keily said: "Nothing remains now but to hold the inquest when Miss Southgate is able to testify. Her story will be accepted. I can see no reason to doubt it. Her possible responsibility for the young man's death will not be probed. The inquest will be into the facts of Barbour's death, and her statement will have to be accepted funless contradicted by direct or strong circumstantial evidence. I can't see now where this is going to come from.
